WEDNESDAY EVENING, DEC 14.

THE NEWEST I HING IN SUICIDE -The latest novel y is attempts at suicide comes, of course from Paris. A workman having quarreled with his wife, withdrew to his room, at z 1 a poignerd, the blade of which was ten centi. metres ling, took a hommer, and, putting the point of the paigner! to the top of his head, dreve the blade nome with a blow. I stead of dropping dead, as one would suppose, the Frenchman,it is declared by the Siecle Medicale experienced no unusual secsation, either montal or physical. He ther upon endeavored to ex rice the poistard, tur, though he sugged bard, he sugged in vsin. Do one were sent for, who found themselves unable to extract the polgestd. "The man," we read, 'w.s u'timately taken to a workshop in the neighborhead, recompanied by the medical gentlemen, and here he was sected on the floor, helo down io a sitting positry by two persons, whilst m chani alliones was used to draw the weapon from the skull." This operation having been successfully performed, he was sent to St. Louis Hospital and kept there a week. He was then sent home to mase, perchance, over come surer means of taking his own life than burying a poignard in his brain. Se entific mon are racking their heads over the problem this singular cost presents

BARONESS BURDETT-COUTTS -A correspondent of the Hartford Evening Post was not long ago present at a garden party given by the Baroness Burdett-Coutte. She sage:

Down the pathway walked a tall, gree ful lady. dressed to a soft, twilled sik, with velicatelyshaded flowers sprinkled cv r its white ground. On her shoulders she were a white Canton crape shawi, folded tquare hk : a fichu, and over her brown bair, to watch no gray was visible, was a tipy bonnet of white lace and like ribbon-a charming toilet, very becoming to a charming women, the Baroness Burdet. - Joutte. She stepped forward, introducing herself to the guests, inquired their names, and in toro pre-sented them to her bushand. With her great influence and wealth, her manner is cary, un-pretentions and unassuming as a child's can be. and jet her gracious, quiet sympathy is so flor-ly expressed within her ophero that it is like the delicate perfume of a flower. She has a refixed fice with a clightly victorary expression, combined with a look of attaccerartic breeding and culture. In everything but years she has the advantage of her youthful husband. He might have scarched the world over and not found a more interesting woman or a more lovely nature than that of the Baroness Bardett-Coutts.
